

2026-2027 Postdoctoral Residency Position in Psychology

Position Title

Postdoctoral Resident, Full-Time, In-Person

Salary: $54,500 (Increases to $57,500 if HSPP designation is obtained prior to end of training year)

Background

Integrated Psychological Center of Indiana (IPCI) is a group private practice on the Northside of Indianapolis offering 1 postdoctoral resident position for the 2026-2027 training year. This postdoctoral residency focuses on specific training in sex therapy and couples therapy, built on a foundation of generalist competencies, including the provision of therapy across the lifespan and psychological evaluation/testing. Residents will also gain experience with training and teaching by providing professional/community presentations, offering collateral supervision for doctoral practicum student trainees, contributing to the practice newsletter/social media, as well as with group practice management. Training will also focus on providing longer-term, process oriented, relational therapy and will include training from psychodynamic psychotherapy models, Internal Family Systems (IFS), Emotionally-Focused Couples Therapy (EFT), and Gottman-Method Couples Therapy. Supervision will incorporate identification and exploration of countertransference/transference dynamics and self-of-the-therapist dimensions.

Postdoctoral residents will obtain 2 hours per week of individual supervision with at least one hour per week from Dr. Maria Hanzlik, Clinical Psychologist and AASECT-Certified Sex Therapist and Supervisor. As a result, some supervision hours will be eligible for application toward AASECT-sex therapy certification for interested parties. Residents will have a planned sequence of internal and external training and continuing education to support developing competencies in sex and couples therapy. This 12-month position can be extended beyond the training year for candidates who meet certain qualifications. Postdoctoral residents are W2 employees and are paid biweekly. There is an expectation for in-office work with flexibility for occasional work-from-home arrangements as needs periodically arise.

Position Description

- Program dates: September 1, 2026-August 27, 2026 (with some flexibility for start date window)
- 40 hours/week, Monday through Friday
- Clinical duties:
 - Schedule 28 patient contact hours to meet 25 hour patient contact hours per week (3 hours are 5pm or later)

- 50% (minimum) of caseload consisting of couples and sex therapy cases
- 25% psychological testing (10 testing cases in one year)
- 25% other clinical presentations/populations
- Co-facilitate at least one process-oriented group and one psychoeducational group in a training year.
- Engage in one community presentation during the postdoctoral year.
- Contribute to the practice newsletter and social media content creation to learn dissemination of psychology information to a non-academic audience.
- Engage in 2 hours of dedicated business of practice responsibilities per week.
- Scheduled training in introductory EFT and Gottman Method Couples Therapy models and introductory sex therapy core knowledge areas.

Additional Opportunities

- Provide supervision to IPCI practicum students
- Postdoctoral residents have the potential to be invited to join IPCI as a full-time clinician/psychologist if certain eligibility criteria are met. These criteria include, but are not limited to, successful completion of the EPPP licensing exam prior to the end of the training year and maintaining caseload and documentation requirements.

About Integrated Psychological Center of Indiana

Integrated Psychological Center of Indiana (IPCI) is an outpatient group practice that serves children, adolescents, and adults and provides individual, couple, family, and group therapy as well as psychological evaluation services. We have a variety of specialties including relationship therapy, treating sexual concerns, perinatal mental health, trauma treatment, Latinx mental health, and working with LGBTQ+ communities.

IPCI is committed to being the leading provider of effective and quality mental health assessment and treatment, providing long-lasting, meaningful change and growth to people across communities. This is achieved through identifying and integrating all parts of one's self. We are a group of psychologists that value collaboration, collegiality, and connection. Desirable candidates will share IPCI's mission and values and are interested in continuing with the practice as a full-time clinician following the completion of the training year. Although this postdoctoral position prepares residents for full-time clinician practice, there are opportunities in the practice for advancement into future leadership roles with reduced clinical requirements.
